Every good painter paints what he is." Jackson Pollock, American Abstract Expressionist artist.

This short phrase speaks to the long soulful journey of twin artists, Rachel and Rebecca Crouch. These Chicago natives were born of these seasoned and inspiring brush stroke of artist and mother, Dianne Crouch.
As children, they were immediately immersed into the world of art and had no choice but to develop that natural born aptitude. They both produce work in varied media using color, texture, movement, and flow. Their pieces are about the impossible and the discovery of promise. Music, life, limits, and change are just a few themes prevalent in Rachel's work. The origin of Rebecca's artistic premise stem from heartache, forgiveness, and new beginnings. Their poignant pieces are not only beautifully intoxicating stories, but also timeless works of art. Indulge in the art of Rachel and Rebecca Crouch, where they tell their stories, one painting at a time.
